

EXCHANGE AGREEMENTS

collaborate electronically. These rules supplement the basic underlying agreements for goods, services or collaborative efforts providing a framework for electronic trading and collaboration. Use of a standard template provides benefits to both Prime and Supplier. The terms and conditions in these templates can be reused by all Parties eliminating the need to re-negotiate independent terms and conditions for every new situation.

GLOBAL ELECTRONIC COLLABORATIVE AGREEMENT (GECA)

The GECA provides global parties with a common set of rules by which they agree to exchange electronic data. The template is used to support electronic collaboration between companies engaging in domestic and international eBusiness practices. The GECA will supplement the primary terms and conditions and will govern the exchange of collaborative eData.

GLOBAL TRADING PARTNER AGREEMENT (GTPA)

The purpose of the model template GTPA is to supplement the primary terms and conditions governing the purchase and sale of goods and services between trading partners. This agreement provides the contractual framework governing general eBusiness exchanges. It will provide companies, large and small, with contractual language for the electronic exchange of information between global trading partners.
